

"MAN WHO SHOT HEATH WAS TALL"

Prosecution in Dodge Murder Trial Springs Surprise in Form of Letter

CLAIMED THAT MRS. DODGE WROTE IT

Samples of Her Hand-Writing Taken While She Was on Witness Stand—Women Spectators Fail to Act on Judge's Hint to Leave Courtroom—Arguments in the Case to be Made Today.

Guilford, Vt., May 10.—The submitting of evidence in the trial of Mrs. Florence M. Dodge for the murder of William Heath, a painter, was practically concluded when Judge A. A. Hall, who is presiding, told the jury that he would expect them to be prepared to deliver their verdict tomorrow night. It is not believed, however, that the fate of Mrs. Dodge will be placed in the hands of the jury tomorrow night, as the arguments of the lawyers for the defense and prosecution may be prolonged.

Prosecution Springs Surprise.

Spectators in the court room were taken unawares today when Mrs. Dodge wrote down on a piece of paper at the dictation of Attorney General Sargent a reference to the "man who shot Mr. Heath."

"The Man Who Shot Heath."

December 27, 1910.—The man who shot Mr. Heath was tall, with heavy dark hair, and a mustache. He had a scar on his forehead. He was in a shop over money. After shooting, he went into the cellar for a few minutes, then went out a fence and lay down beside the fence.

Claim Mrs. Dodge Wrote Letter.

When the attorney read the text of the note from a letter postmarked "Brookline, Mass., Dec. 27," the letter and note were entered as exhibits together with the letter from the "Woman's Relief Corps" which contained entries made by Mrs. Dodge. The prosecution contended that the note as well as the note was written by the defendant.

Handwriting Expert Testifies.

Horace W. Seymour, Portland, Me., handwriting expert, testified that in his opinion the letter read by the attorney general, the note written in the court room by Mrs. Dodge, and the letter from the "Woman's Relief Corps" were written by the same person.

Mrs. Dodge Denied Writing Letter.

A positive denial that she wrote the letter or that she was in Brookline, Mass., on Dec. 27th was made by Mrs. Dodge when she came to the stand in rebuttal. Mrs. Dodge said that she was at the home of a sister in "Concord, Vt., on that day, and her sister, Mrs. Robert Bennett, corroborated her testimony.

Mrs. Dodge Almost Gave Up.

Mrs. Dodge appeared almost as if she were giving up when she was accompanied, as usual, by the jail matron and her daughter, Mrs. Ida Bell.

Cross Examination Resumed.

Attorney General Sargent resumed his cross examination of Mrs. Dodge as soon as court had convened. The attorney general brought out the fact that Mrs. Dodge had written the letter as "business required." She watched him occasionally while he was examining her, and she was doing all the time.

Gets Specimen of Her Handwriting.

Mrs. Dodge was asked by the attorney general for a specimen of her handwriting. She wrote the name "Florence M. Dodge" on a piece of paper, and the court overruled the objection and an examination was noted.

What She Wrote.

"December 27, 1910.—The man who shot Mr. Heath was tall, with heavy dark hair, and wore a mustache."

WOMEN WHO HAVE $600

MAY HAVE RIGHT TO VOTE.

Women's Suffrage Committee Reports Favorably on Such a Bill.

Hartford, May 10.—Senator McNeil today put in a bill to give women the right to vote in the town and borough meetings, but does not provide for their taking part in general elections.

The woman's suffrage committee reported favorably today its third bill to give women the right to vote in municipal elections. It provides that women who have $600 may be made municipal voters under the same conditions as men.

Dr. Cady discussed the topic The Latest in the History of the Bill. He referred to the duty of people to posterity. He said that some women were not fit to be mothers and that they should be kept from having children.

He introduced his remarks by saying that there was a chaotic condition today on the subject of evangelism and then he spoke of the duty of the people to posterity. He said that there was an increasing death rate and a decreasing birth rate in the United States.

SHOT FRIEND FOR A GRAVE ROBBER.

Tragic Mistake by Men Who Had Laid Trap for a Ghoul.

Great Falls, Mont., May 10.—A trap laid by Harry and Conrad, one of the wealthiest men in the state, and his brother, in which they hoped to catch a man who had been seen in the body of the former's one-year-old son from its grave in a cemetery here, last night resulted in the killing by the brothers of a man who was in the act of robbing the grave.

Recently Conrad was notified his child's body would be returned to him if he would pay $500. He went to the cemetery and found a man who was in the act of robbing the grave. He shot him and the man died.

Alfano in a Wild Frenzy

ANOTHER SCENE AT THE TRIAL OF THE CAMORRISTS.

COURT ADJOURNS ABRUPTLY.

Declares His Preference for a Lunatic Asylum or a Prison to Being in the Presence of Abatemaggio.

Viterbo, Italy, May 10.—The afternoon sitting of the trial of the Camorrista was brought to a sudden close by a scene in which Enrico Alfano (Erricone) was the principal actor.

Alfano in a Frenzy.

He had gradually worked himself into a frenzy during the confrontation of Abatemaggio with the principal actor.

How His Wrath Was Aroused.

Alfano's wrath burst forth when the informer began to ridicule Alfano's explanations of his whereabouts at different times.

"Take Me to a Lunatic Asylum."

He suddenly leaped to his feet and, pointing to Abatemaggio, shrieked: "He is driving me mad. Take me to a lunatic asylum. Send me to hard labor, though I am innocent, but relieve me of the presence of that bound. I cannot stand him a moment longer."

President Adjourns Court.

Erricone was ghastly and trembling. He was surrounded by ten prisoners in the cage, and fearing that he might collapse, the president adjourned the court.
